You Press the Keys The Stenotype Does the Rest

We'll say you know no more about shorthand writing than an Apache war-for knew about the map of Mars. You do not know what "pot hooks" indicate r stand for. We can take you as you are now and in six months transform you into a keen, or stand for.

We can take you as you are now and in six mouths transform you into a keen, alert stenotypist, who will be able to take the fastest dictation with skill, ease and rapidity, and without the slightest flurry or flaw.

The Stenotype is a new invention it does not take the place of a typewriter, although it uses typewriter type. It simply enables a person who knows nothing of shorthand to make as accurate a record of any dictation as he could if he knew shorthand. Since it is a machine, its work is, beyond doubt, more accurate, in fact, than man written shorthand And, of course, nothing can be plainer than its work. It's just common, plain, ordinary type that a schoolboy could read
